

Jordan LOSAVIO

Assistant Secretary, Office on Women's Health and Community Health (OWHCH)

Jordan Losavio, Ph.D. serves as Assistant Secretary for the Louisiana Department of Health's Office on Women's Health and Community Health (OWHCH), where she leads the office's vision, strategy, and cross-sector initiatives to improve outcomes for women, families, and communities across Louisiana. Her work focuses on advancing innovative, community-centered approaches that strengthen health systems, elevate local solutions, and improve the wellbeing of Louisiana residents.

Jordan brings a research-driven and data-informed approach to public service, with expertise in community health, population health, organizational systems, and the underlying factors that shape health outcomes. Her work emphasizes translating evidence into practical, data-driven policies and programs that create measurable impact.

She is particularly interested in how stronger systems, better information, and meaningful community partnership can help Louisiana address persistent health challenges more effectively.

In addition to leading the Office on Women's Health and Community Health, Jordan serves on the Medicaid Advisory Committee and chairs its Thrive Well Subcommittee.

A native of Baton Rouge, Jordan earned her Bachelor of Science in Chemical Engineering from Louisiana State University, graduating summa cum laude. After working as an engineer, she returned to LSU, where she earned a Master of Science in nutrition and food sciences and later pursued doctoral research focused on community health and organizational systems.
